Continuing, Magistrate Sweeney said: "The public is paying you and you have no right to abuse or insult citizens. When you visit Pittsburgh again act like a gentleman. If not you will end in the police court."

SOX MUST BRACE FOR CLOSEGROUND

Rowland's Team Is in Bad Slump and May Lose Entire Series Here.

TEAM IS NOT HITTING; LACKS REAL CONFIDENCE

Griffmen, Going at Fast Pace, May Continue as Real Contenders in Race.

BY J. ED GRILLO.

The White Sox will have to undergo a decided change in the form they displayed yesterday if they are to win a single game during their present stay here.

The fact that the team is in a batting slump has had a depressive effect on nearly every member of the squad, and there is an absence of hustle and confidence, which will have to be reviewed before there is a possible chance for the Rowland charges to win many games.

The team has stopped hitting ever since it left on the present trip. Even the recognized master of the bat has fallen down, as is shown by the fact that Eddie Collins made his second hit of the trip in the second game yesterday. Collins' failure to hit is the hardest blow the Sox have suffered. He is continually facing the pitcher at critical stages, when a base hit might change the complexion of the game, and he has failed to come through on a single occasion since the team started this trip.

Now there is no doubt that Collins can hit, but he is in his second slump of the year and the Sox are losing a lot of ground as a result.

Attention was called yesterday to the fact that Griffith's pitchers were going better than they have at any time this season. This referred to Johnson, Gallia and Ayers, and the hope was expressed that Boehling and Shaw also would come back to form. Boehling in the opening game yesterday demonstrated that he is to be reckoned with during the rest of the season. It was the best he has pitched in some time, and he seemed as good at the finish as he was at the start. If he can continue that pace it gives Griffith four airtight pitchers and there is no telling how high that may land the Griffmen in the present race.

Merito Acosta was very much in evidence in the second game. He scored two of his team's three runs, got two hits and stole a base, which helped to score one of the runs. In the field he was everything that came his way. Acosta now is showing that it was well worth Griffith's while to carry him the several miles from Chicago to here.

Kopp played in the first game, and the first time he drove a liner to right center which had all the earmarks of a triple when it left the bat. Felsch, however, got under way with the crack of the bat and managed to pull the drive down.

At no time since Griffith has been in charge here has the Sox had a formidable-looking team like the present one. That infield looks a little better every day, and his outfielders are playing up to a higher standard now than it ever has before. Barring accidents, this team is going to be hard to stop. It is hitting at the right time, its pitchers are showing superior form, and it is displaying a lot of hustle and confidence in its playing.

Seven of the nine games played at home have been victories, and Griffith is hopeful of continuing this pace during the remainder of the campaign.

Russell, the Sox southpaw, will most likely be on the mound for the visitors today.

It develops that Kopp really was responsible for his being taken out of the game yesterday. After the first game the youngsters told Griffith he was not at home in that sun field, and that he would like to be given a chance to practice out there for a while before being played regularly.

He said these games were too important to be thrown away, and that Griffith had some one else who could fill the place for a while it might be the right move. Griffith was dumfounded by the request, but apparently he was Kopp's position, and immediately notified Acosta that he would play the second game. Now Kopp is practicing morning and afternoon. He keeps himself in the field where the sun is shining because he is determined to make himself a sun feeder.

"If Jim Shaw has as much stuff today as he showed me when he was warmed up during the second game yesterday he will be pitted against the White Sox today." If that is not right Walter Johnson will be on the mound, said Manager Griffith this morning.

Shaw has been bothered with his arm, but, according to Griffith, it seems to have recovered, and he is pretty sure to pitch. Johnson warmed up several times during yesterday's double-header, and that is not a good thing for a pitcher if he is expected to pitch the next day. So Griffith is particularly anxious to give his speed king another day's rest.

Manager Griffith very sensibly was taking no chances on having the Sox lose him out in either contest. He had Walter Johnson ready during the closing innings of both games, so that he would be in the game if either Boehling or Gallia should have shown signs of weakening. It was a hot day, and both twirlers had to go at top speed the entire route, so that there always was danger of their faltering as the closing innings approached.

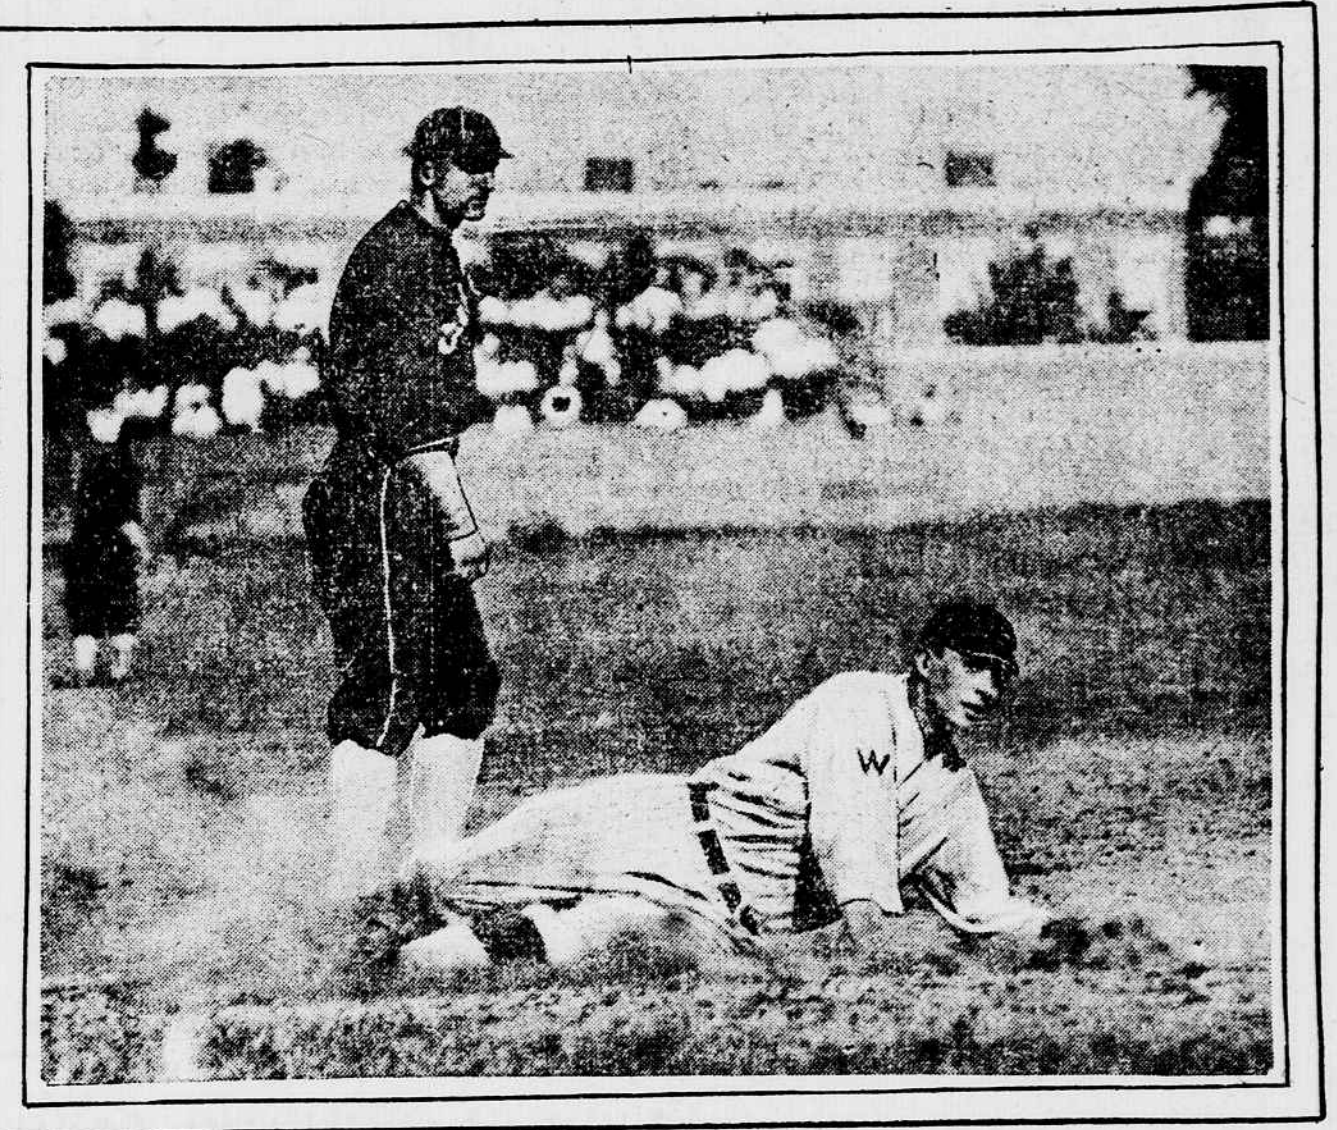

By their splendid work during the last month or more the Griffmen have again made themselves contenders in the pennant race. They are ten games behind the leaders, but that is not an impossible margin to overcome, and at the present pace the team is setting up a record that is almost unbeatable. From the start of their second western trip to date the Nationals have won nineteen games and lost nine, a very good percentage.

Before Manager Rowland can hope to win any pennants in this league it will be necessary for him to do some major strengthening. He was pointed out at the outset of the campaign, the Sox are weak at first and third, and incidentally none too well fortified in the outfield, though Felsch gives promise of improving. The Sox may continue to be beaters in the race this year, but there is not much chance of their beating out either Detroit or Boston.

After having seen the work of Kopp, the young south-paw of the Browns, who was made for Kopp to join the Tigers, but for some reason he was cast aside and St. Louis picked him up. The Sox would stand a mighty good chance for the flag if they had Kopp, for he looks to be one of the best left-handers in the league, though he still is only a boy.

Henry took Ainsmith's place in the eighth inning of the second game. Ainsmith is bothered with a bruised hand, and it was causing him a lot of pain when he was retired.

AINSMITH REACHES THIRD BY SLIDE AFTER SCORING ACOSTA WITH TRIPLE IN FIFTH INNING OF SECOND GAME.

GREAT PITCHING HUMBLER CHICAGO IN DUAL AFFRAY

Boehling Wins 1-to-0 Game From Scott, While Gallia Takes Second From Cicotte, 3 to 1—Griffmen Hit Timely.

Brilliant pitching and timely hitting by the Nationals made it possible for them to win both ends of yesterday's double-header from the White Sox. Just how effective the slab work of both Boehling and Gallia was is best shown by the fact that the visitors scored but one run in the eighteen innings of play.

The Rowland crew was outplayed in both games. They did not hit enough to ever have a chance, and while opportunities were numerous for them to overcome the short lead which the Griffmen held from time to time, they failed to come through with the timely wallop.

Behind the local twirlers the team played grand ball. Its defensive was unbeatable, while its offense was just strong enough to give it the advantage.

Second Game a Thriller.

The second struggle was a tight one on the first four innings. Both sides had a chance or two for runs, but could not get the timely hit, and it looked as if the Sox would break the tie in the fifth, when Felsch started matters with a double to left. J. Collins sacrificed him to third, and it was up to Mayor and Blackburn to bring him home, but both failed, leaving Felsch standing on third.

The Nationals had better luck in their half. With one down, Acosta singled to right, and on the first ball pitched Ainsmith drove a triple to left, scoring Acosta. McBride, not to be outdone, dropped a Texas leaguer into right, and Ainsmith scored with run No. 2.

In the last half of the seventh the Nationals brought their total of runs up to three. With one out Acosta singled, stole second and scored on McBride's single. The score:

Boehling Brilliant in First Game.

Thanks to a wild throw by Blackburn in the first inning of the initial game, the Griffmen scored the run which proved the only one of the game.

After Moeller had been retired on a fly to left Foster singled and Milan doubled to right. Blackburn got the throw some distance from the bag and threw it far over Schalk's head at the plate, Foster running home and Milan getting the next base. Both sides watched airtight ball thereafter and Milan was left.

Though Weaver hit safely and Collins walked in the Sox's half after one out, Fournier's line drive to Foster was turned into a double play and Boehling saved the next at third. He was not in trouble again until the fifth, when with two out he walked. Boehling scored safely, but Murphy was not equal to the emergency and was out at first. In the sixth he also had two out after two were out. Fournier walked and Felsch singled, but he fanned J. Collins. Fournier opened the ninth with a single, but Boehling retired the next three batters on infield plays. The score:

COACH COURTNEY RECOVERS.

Specialist Finds No Permanent Damage to Brain or Nerves.

ITHACA, August 5.—Examinations by a specialist having failed to reveal any evidence of permanent damage to the brain or nerves of Charles E. Courtney, it was announced yesterday at the City Hospital that the veteran coach of the Cornell crew would be able to continue his training of the Cornell oarsmen.

He has so far recovered from the fractured skull sustained June 13 on the way to Poughkeepsie that his physicians say he will be able to leave the hospital in a day or two. Such a recovery at Courtney's age, sixty-five, is considered quite remarkable. The following statement was issued at the hospital:

"Mr. Courtney was seen in consultation this morning by Dr. Henry M. Thomas, professor of neurology in the Cornell Medical College, and neurologist to Johns Hopkins Hospital. Dr. Thomas did not find any evidence to indicate permanent damage to the brain or nerves, and upon his advice it is expected that Mr. Courtney will leave the hospital in a day or two. It will be necessary for him to lead a somewhat quiet life for several months, but there is no reason to suppose that he will not be able to resume his duties as coach of the Cornell crews."
